A wandering Mind is an Unhappy Mind

1. How are you feeling right now?
2. What are you doing right now?
3. Are you thinking about something other than what you're doing?

- Mindfulness invites us to “wake-up” to our habitual, “unskillful” patterns & behaviors

One habit is to run after a thought,
over and over again

Your mind is like this water,
my friend.

When it is agitated,
it becomes difficult to see.
But if you allow it to settle...
the answer becomes clear.

Another habit is to avoid certain thoughts, feelings

Developing the Mental Muscle

Mindfulness, A Mental Exercise

Mindful Breathing

1. Attention (focus)

Observing or noticing experience

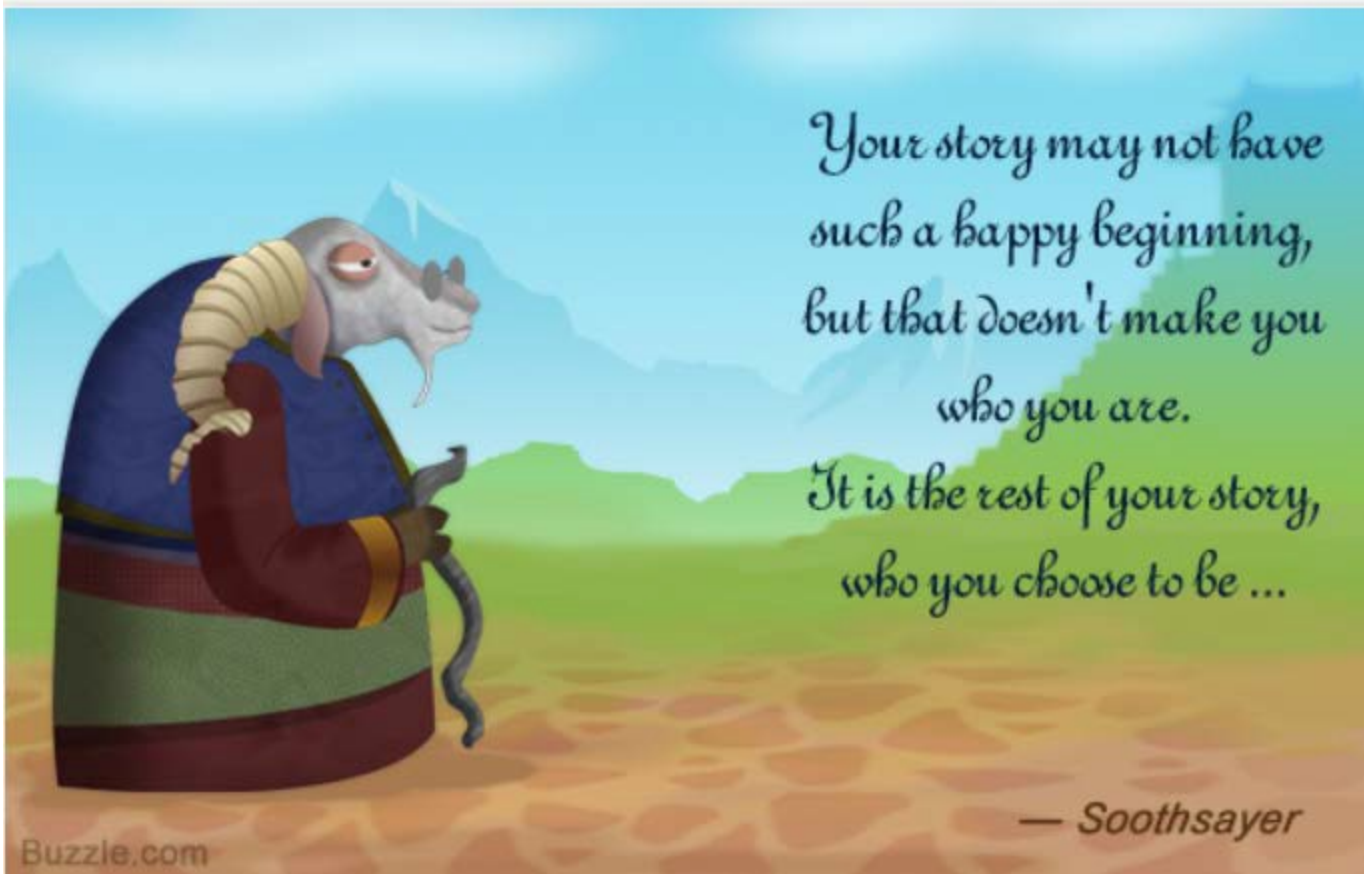

2. Awareness

3. Acceptance

Non-reactivity to internal experience

Non-judging of experience

Simple, but not Easy...

Your story may not have such a happy beginning,
but that doesn't make you who you are.

It is the rest of your story,
who you choose to be ...

Mindfulness gives you choice to respond, not to react

Stress Shrinks Brain Networks

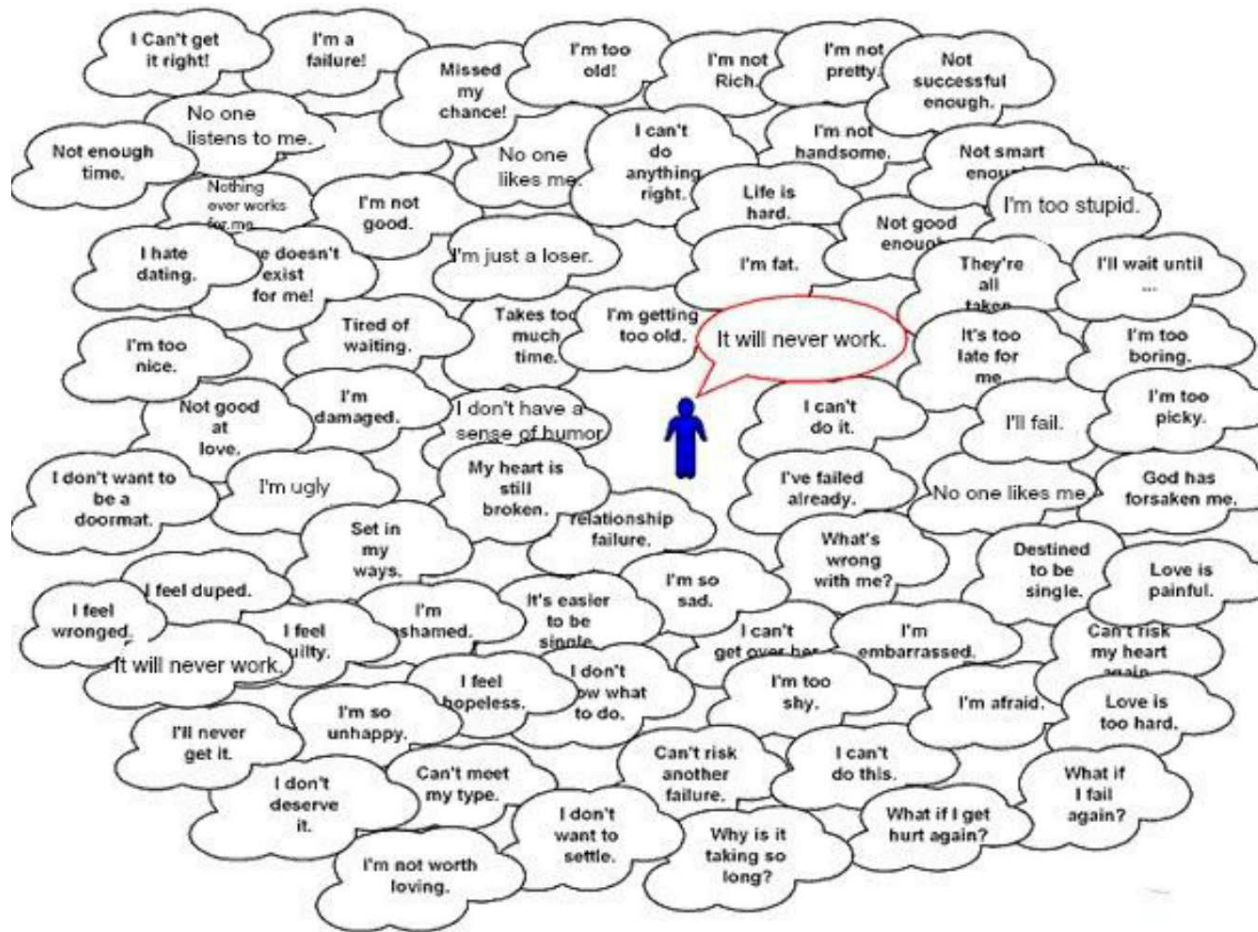

mindfulness fosters coherence, reduces “flipping your lid”

More cognitive flexibility...

Compassion

Witnessing suffering

Emotion/motivation

Action: Prosocial behavior

People can be very compassionate towards others but forget to extend that kindness to themselves

As caregivers, we're supposed to take care, work hard, fulfill our responsibilities, be the best... After all, the other person is relying on us, depending on us.

However, sometimes/often feelings of irritation, annoyance, inadequacy, frustration, anger can occur, and pile up over time... leading us to be

Excessively self-critical, guilty, and un-kind to ourselves

As we face criticism(s) in ourselves or by others, we become defensive and feel crushed.

↳ antidote to self-criticism is self-compassion

RELAX....

You're not Perfect

You are going to make mistakes

Worrying about whether you're a good enough caregiver will NOT improve your caregiving skills...it will only make it worse

Imperfect'# Worthless

Even the people you most respect make mistakes and have done things they regret.

Relax.

EVERYONE makes mistakes.
Everyone is imperfect.

But each of us is wonderful in our own way—
in spite of being imperfect.

And you can be a WONDERFUL caregiver even though you aren't the perfect caregiver.

Self-Compassion Leads to Resilience

involves facing failure, insecurity, or mistakes in a radically different way. Self-compassion involves 3 things:

Self-Kindness

Common Humanity

Mindfulness

Joy & Sleep are also Vital Nutrients
