Belonging in Work and Life

As we prepared this issue, we focused on two major awareness events that occur at this time of year: youth suicide prevention and disability employment. Both topics are critically important, and both relate to whether young people with disabilities feel connected, supported, and included. They also remind us of the ongoing need to build communities where every young person feels valued and hopeful about the future.

The statistics on student depression, suicidal thoughts, and attempts come from the Hawaii Youth Risk Behavior Survey (HYRBS), administered every two years to a sample of middle and high school students in public schools. The Hawaii Health Data Warehouse (HHDW) publishes these findings and offers tools that allow users to create customized reports using variables such as grade, sex, and ethnicity.

At the time we completed this issue, SPIN was unable to isolate disability status for the data shown on page 2. Luckily, HHDW staff have committed to producing a disability-specific report on suicidal thoughts and actions, which we will share in a future newsletter.

Reviewing the current data—and anticipating future updates—highlights a troubling reality: many of our middle and high school students are not only experiencing depression, but also making plans to harm themselves or attempting to end their lives. We have included several resources to help all of us support youth through prevention and early intervention.

Regarding disability employment, it's important to recognize that students with disabilities who exit high school continue to have lower rates of higher education enrollment and employment than their peers without disabilities.

One key agency supporting pathways to employment is the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation. Many families are unaware of these services or unsure how to advocate for their child while still in secondary school. To help raise awareness and strengthen advocacy, we've included four infographics on pages 4–7 outlining available supports.

DVR Services in Hawaii DOE

The Hawai'i Department of Education (DOE) partners with the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) through the IEP process, to provide a variety of student trainings like work-place readiness, benefits counseling and self-advocacy training, along with work-based learning opportunities, both paid and unpaid, during the school year or summer break.

Starting at Age 14

- 1) When your child turns 14, the IEP will include a statement about their transition needs, like classes or trainings to take.
- 2) Ask the school to invite DVR to your next IEP meeting. This can happen at any age before the child exits high school, but earlier the better.
- 3) Fill out the 2-page DVR application for Pre-ETS services. Your child's care coordinator can help fill out the form and turn it in to the DVR counselor. Pre-ETS can start as early as 14 years.

The 5 Main Pre-ETS Services

Pre-Employment Transition Services (Pre-ETS) are provided by an outside agency contracted by DVR called a Community Rehabilitation Provider or CRP.

The 5 services are:

- 1) Job Exploration Counseling
- 2) Instruction on Self-Advocacy
- 3) Work Readiness Training
- 4) Work-Based Learning Experiences
- 5) Counseling on Post-Secondary Opportunities

All students with an active IEP or 504 plan are considered "potentially eligible" for DVR and can receive these services, after they apply for Pre-ETS and are approved by a DVR counselor.

Apply for Full DVR Services

Starting as soon as 14 years old, you can apply for full DVR services for your child. This is a longer, 22 page application that will document their disability and the need for supports in the DVR program. With full DVR, services like job coaching, vocational & technical training & benefits counseling can be provided. They can also cover job-related expenses like equipment, uniforms and college.

Starting at Age 16

- 1) The IEP will now include measurable goals for life after high school. These goals will include education & training, employment and independent living skills.
- 2) Work with the IEP team to fill out the transition page to include assessments for job exploration & skills, preferences, interests, needs & strengths (PINS), along with classes that support job interests and opportunities for work-based learning. Update this page annually or if things change.
- 3) Pre-ETS training continues. Discuss with your IEP team who will provide these services at school and what that will look like.
- 4) Your child can begin work-based learning opportunities, paid or unpaid, during the school day, after school or during breaks and summer.

Work-Based Learning

Starting at age 16, students can begin valuable on-the-job training that is provided by the school, on or off campus, or by their CRP provider. This training can be paid (minimum wage or higher) or unpaid. For students on the certificate track, work-based learning can happen year around. For students on a diploma track, it is offered during the summer break.

Transition Words to Know

The Hawai'i Department of Education (DOE) partners with the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) through the Individualized Education Program (IEP) process. Below are some common acronyms and words you may hear at an IEP meeting, with the DVR counselor or during training and work opportunities.

DVR

- CRP: Community Rehabilitation Program - private organizations, contracted by DVR, that provide Pre-ETS training and work-based learning to students.
- Full DVR Eligible: After filling out the complete DVR application, and the student is found eligible, they can receive additional services like a job coach or assistive technology, as written in the IPE, while still in school.
- IPE: Individualized Plan for Employment - a roadmap of the student's full DVR employment goals and how to achieve them. It lists services, supports and who provides them, updated annually.
- Potentially Eligible: A student with a disability, aged 14-21, who has an active IEP or 504 plan, who can receive Pre-ETS services after applying for them.
- Pre-ETS: Pre-Employment Transition Services - includes Job Exploration, Instruction on Self-Advocacy, Work-Readiness Training, Work-Based Learning Experiences and Counseling on Post-Secondary opportunities.

DOE

- PINS: Preferences, Interests, Needs and Strengths. These are used to fill out the transition page of the IEP, to drive goals for education & training, employment, and independent learning.
- Project LIFE: A DOE transition program, available only in certain districts, for 14-18 year olds. Students attend a work site off campus, 2-3 days a week for 2-3 hours, accompanied by DOE staff to learn job skills. For students on a certificate pathway.
- Project SEARCH: A DOE transition program, available only in certain districts, for 18-21 year olds, who work at a minimum of 4 hours at an off campus job site with DOE staff for the whole school year. For students on a certificate pathway.
- WBL: Work-Based Learning. Paid or unpaid work experience that can be on campus, led by DOE staff, or it can be off campus, led by DOE or CRP staff. After each WBL opportunity, an evaluation is generated and shared with the DVR counselor, to plan and prepare for the next work experience.

Q & A

Q: Where can I find out who the CRP's are in my area and what they do?

A: Visit the Footsteps to Transition website, a Hawaii-based transition resource. Under the "College & Career" tab, you will find a list of CRP's statewide.

Q: Can DVR pay for college classes?

A: Yes, as long as the classes align with the employment goals of the student, as written in the IPE, along with other requirements, like filling out a FAFSA form.

Q: Can a student have more than one CRP?

A: Yes. Talk to your child's DVR counselor to find out what other CRPs can offer.

What Parents Can Do

- Talk to your teen about their interests, needs and strengths and share that information with the IEP team.
- Visit our transition website Footstepstotransition.weebly.com to learn more about transition on your island and attend a transition fair.
- Ask questions and be an active partner in the transition process.

DVR Employment Options After High School

The Hawai'i Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) has three main programs for young adults to access job training and employment. DVR contracts with multiple Community Rehabilitation Providers (CRP) across the state to provide individualized services, which are written into the Individual Plan for Employment (IPE) and approved by a DVR Counselor.

DVR Program	Purpose of Program	Key Elements	What the CRP Does	Best For Youth Who
Vocational Work Adjustment Training Services (VWATS) 	To provide job readiness skills in mobility, personal care, self direction, interpersonal skills, communication, work tolerance, work skills, and work-based learning opportunities.	- Builds upon skills learned in a classroom setting and connects them to a real-world job - Provides a variety of short-term paid or unpaid work experiences	- May provide a job coach - Provides skill growth through training - Looks for a work site and provides support while there	- Want to learn new job skills - Build their resume - Increase work readiness skills - Work part-time in the community and gain work experience
Supported Employment (SE)  Customized Employment (CE) 	SE Provides ongoing services to support youth with the most significant disabilities, in a CIE setting. CE designs work opportunities, based on the persons interest & abilities.	A job coach can stay with you for up to 18 months, longer if needed based on information provided at DVR intake	- Provides a job coach - Helps company understand your work needs & accommodations - Continued training and support	- Needs a job coach longer than 90 days - Needs long-term supports and services
Competitive Integrated Employment (CIE) 	To work for a public or private company, earning minimum wage or higher, with benefits and opportunities for growth and advancement, in an integrated setting.	- The goal for all DVR participants - You work for and are paid by the company who hires you 20+ hours a week - You can be fired	- May provide a job coach - Helps the company understand your work needs and any accommodations required	- Need help finding and keeping a job - Want to work full or part time - Can maintain a job without long term supports
Things to Remember 	If you get and keep a job past the probation period, DVR will eventually fade supports and close your case.	If you lose your job, you can re-apply for DVR services for help finding a new job or get training in a new type of work.	If the CRP provides a paid temporary work site, you will be paid by the CRP, not the work site company.	If you have questions about any of these programs, contact your DVR Counselor.

Q&A About DVR Services After High School

Services through the Hawai'i Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) are varied and individualized for each person receiving services. Here are some questions and answers for participants and families to better understand DVR services and their Individual Plan for Employment (IPE).

Q: How long can I work at a temporary work-based learning job site - either paid or unpaid?

A: Each temporary work-based learning site is up to 120 hours, unless an extension has been approved by your DVR counselor.

Q: If I get a work-based learning, paid temporary job, who pays me for my work experience?

A: The Community Rehabilitation Provider (CRP) becomes your employer, and you will fill out hiring paperwork with them.

Q: How much money will I earn at a temporary work-based learning job site?

A: At least minimum wage, or the same wage as others doing the same job at the same work site.

Q: Can I be enrolled in more than one CRP?

A: Yes. Talk with your DVR counselor to learn what each CRP can offer.

Q: Can DVR pay for college classes or other vocational trainings or schools?

A: Yes. As long as your employment goal needs a certificate, college degree or other kind of training to attain it and your DVR counselor approves it. In the IPE, it is listed as Training Services and can be done at the same time as VWATS or Supported Employment, or by itself.

Q: If I move from one island to another, will my DVR services follow me?

A: Yes! Your DVR counselor will transfer your case to the island where you are moving and you will sign up for a new CRP.

Q: What does a job coach do?

A: They help you with your work-readiness skills, can assist you to create or update your resume and fill out applications, practice interview skills, and support you while working on the job.

Q: What does it mean "may" need a job coach?

A: Not everyone needs to have a job coach with them. Some might need someone to help them the first week, then the coach fades. Others may need support for a longer period of time. Talk to your CRP and DVR counselor if you feel you need a job coach, and for how long that service might last.

Q: I have a job coach. How long will I have them for?

A: If you are at a temporary work-based learning job site, the coach will stay with you during the 120 hours of work. Then they will resume working with you for your VWATS training.

A: If you are hired by a company, the coach will stay with you until after you have completed their probationary period. Once you and your new employer feel you are stable, the job coach will fade and eventually stop.

A: If you are working under supported employment (SE), the coach can stay with you for several months, as needed.

Q: If my DVR case is closed and I reapply to DVR, do I have to fill out the 20 page application again?

A: No, there is an expedited process for those who have been eligible for DVR in the past. Some parts of the application may need to be updated due to interests, skills and experience.
